

MORE INSIGHT

My mission is to help you live a great life—where focus replaces fear—peace replaces panic—and drive replaces depression. It starts with getting you to concentrate on some truths that are so well-known most people take them for granted.

1. Our time is limited—so wasted time is wasted lifespan. Don't let fear steal your focus.
2. Our time is limited—both peace and panic are choices. We all possess the ability to choose peace—even in the midst of a horrible situation.
3. Our time is limited—and depression is a waste of time that solves nothing. The only way to reach your goal is to keep working toward it. A cross-country walk begins with the first step—and doesn't end until you reach your destination. And all the difficulties you may suffer along the way should only serve as character builders.
4. Our time is limited—but there is a spiritual life—after this physical life—that NEVER ends.

All of us want to live a successful life—according to our definition of success. But what keeps us from that success? Mainly fear, distractions, and let downs. If you give it some thought, none of these things has the power to actually stop us. They can all ONLY try to convince us to stop ourselves.

My purpose is two-fold. First, it's to get people to realize that they have the power to accomplish any goal they desire to accomplish. They just need to realize that perseverance and patience can and will defeat almost any problem they could ever face. Notice I said "can and will defeat ALMOST any problem." There is a problem that none of us can defeat. A problem that will defeat us all. And that problem is physical death. This brings me to my second and most important point—spiritual life.

The reason we all should be hyper-focused on our goals is because we're all here for a purpose. We're all here to serve Almighty God while serving each other. Think about all the different talents we possess. None of us possess all the same talents—because your talents are supposed to serve me—and my talents are supposed to serve you.

But, after all our goals are achieved and we live our best lives—while serving one another—there comes a time when it all ends. That's when we leave the realm of time and enter the realm of eternity—where there is no time. The clock stops. There is no past or future. There is only the eternal NOW. And there are only two sides to eternity. One is eternally good-called heaven. The other eternally evil-called hell.

The good news is though—we get to determine which side of eternity we end up on. Each of my books attempts to get the reader to understand the absolute—monumental—importance of making the right choice.

Although we all know we have an expiration date—too many of us don't understand, take seriously, or believe the gravity of the decision we make on this physical side of life—and how it will affect what happens to us once we pass on—cross over—or transition to—the spiritual side of life. Most people never give eternity a second thought until they're old or it's already too late and they find themselves suffering—forever.
